Rather of a physical gun, the online Russian roulette game of chance utilizes a Random Number Generator (RNG) or provably reasonable cryptographic algorithms. The setup typically works as follows:

- Chamber Selection: The digital "cylinder" is normally set to six chambers, though some variations enable users to customize the variety of chambers (e.g., altering the chances from 1-in-6 to 1-in-3).
- The Ante: Players place a wager in fiat currency or cryptocurrencies like Bitcoin or Ethereum.
- The Trigger Pull: The player clicks an on-screen button to "pull the trigger."
- The Outcome: The system creates a random result. A "click" indicates the gamer endures and wins a payment multiplier. A "bang" means the gamer loses their whole stake.
