

Custom Closets Maryville TN

Maryville sits close enough to Alcoa that it is practically a neighbor to Closet Factory Knoxville's own manufacturing facility, and the connection runs deeper than geography. Owner Dan Nigolian and his wife Coral chose the area specifically after hearing good things about East Tennessee from friends who had lived in Maryville, and the business ultimately put down roots just a few minutes from town. That local history shows up in how well Closet Factory's Knoxville team maps.app.goo.gl custom closets Knoxville knows the Maryville housing market, from the historic homes near downtown to newer developments further out toward Blount County's growing edges. Maryville's mix of older homes and new construction creates two fairly different kinds of closet projects. In established neighborhoods near Maryville College, closets tend to be smaller and more irregularly shaped, often requiring custom angled shelving or corner solutions that a stock closet kit simply cannot accommodate. In newer Blount County developments, primary closets are often larger but still finished with basic wire shelving that leaves significant storage potential untapped. Closet Factory designers approach both situations the same way, with a free in-home measurement and a design built around the specific space rather than a one size fits all layout. Garage storage is a particularly common request among Maryville homeowners, many of whom have larger lots and more outdoor equipment, from lawn care tools to gear for nearby Smoky Mountain outdoor activities, than homeowners closer to downtown Knoxville. A well planned garage system with wall cabinets, overhead storage, and a dedicated workbench area gives Maryville families a place for that equipment that does not involve stepping over it every time the car needs to be parked. Closet Factory | 206 South Calderwood Street, Alcoa, TN 37701 | (865) 268-5420 Because the Alcoa manufacturing facility is so close to Maryville, turnaround on custom orders and any post installation adjustments tends to be efficient, with the same team that designed the project also handling production and installation rather than passing the job between separate departments or outside contractors. Maryville homeowners considering a closet, garage, pantry, or home office upgrade can start with the same no cost design consultation Closet Factory offers throughout its Knoxville service area, with every finished system backed by a lifetime warranty regardless of which side of the county line the home sits on. Maryville College's presence in town also brings a steady population of faculty, staff, and families connected to the college into the local housing market, many of whom own or rent homes in the walkable neighborhoods surrounding campus. These homes tend to fall into the same older, character rich category that benefits from a custom measured approach, and Closet Factory Knoxville designers are familiar with the specific closet layouts common throughout this part of town from years of working in the area.

Closet Factory Address: 206 South Calderwood Street, Alcoa, TN 37701 Phone: (865) 268-5420 FAQ About Custom Closets Knoxville What does a custom closet cost in Knoxville? Pricing depends on the size of the closet, the materials chosen, and how many accessories like drawers or shoe racks are built in. Closet Factory Knoxville provides an itemized quote after a free in-home design consultation at 206 South Calderwood Street in Alcoa, and offers a local price match guarantee against any comparable, already designed quote. How long does a custom closet installation take? Most Knoxville area projects run three to four weeks from purchase to installation, since every system is manufactured locally at the Alcoa facility rather than shipped in from an out of state factory. A smaller reach-in closet is often completed in a single visit by Closet Factory's full-time installation crew. What is the difference between a custom closet and a DIY closet kit? A DIY kit from a big box store is built to fixed, standard sizes and generally requires the homeowner to handle assembly and mounting. A custom system from Closet Factory Knoxville is measured and manufactured to the exact dimensions of the room, installed by trained staff, and backed by a lifetime warranty rather than no warranty at all. What are common closet organization mistakes to avoid? The most frequent mistakes Closet Factory Knoxville designers see are ignoring vertical space above a standard shelf, designing only around what is currently owned instead of leaving room to grow, and skipping proper lighting inside the closet. A free design consultation walks through all three before any materials are ordered. What is the difference between a reach-in and a walk-in closet? A reach-in closet is a single-door opening, typically two to six feet wide, accessed from outside the space. A walk-in closet is large enough to physically step into, generally starting around five feet by five feet. Closet Factory Knoxville designs both, maximizing every inch of a reach-in and adding more elaborate layouts, like islands or seating, in a larger walk-in. How much storage space can a custom closet system add? Because a standard wire shelf and rod setup wastes most of the vertical space in a closet, Knoxville clients regularly see close to double the practical storage capacity within the same physical footprint once a second hang zone, drawers, and taller shelving are added. Does Closet Factory Knoxville offer financing? Yes. Closet Factory Knoxville offers 0 percent financing for six to fifteen months with approved credit, making larger projects like a full primary closet or a combined closet and home office more manageable within a monthly budget. What areas does Closet Factory Knoxville serve? Closet Factory Knoxville serves the greater Knoxville area and 27 surrounding East Tennessee counties, including Farragut, Maryville, Oak Ridge, Powell, Lenoir City, and the Sevierville, Gatlinburg, and Pigeon Forge area near the Great Smoky Mountains, all from its Alcoa headquarters. What materials are used in custom closet systems? Closet Factory Knoxville's most common base material is melamine, a durable, laminate-coated panel available in dozens of finishes, chosen for its resistance to East Tennessee's humidity. Stained and painted solid wood options are also available for a more furniture-quality look in primary closets and dressing rooms. Is a custom closet worth the investment compared to wire shelving? Builder-grade wire shelving is inexpensive but wastes a significant amount of a closet's usable volume and can sag or snag fabric over time. A custom system from Closet Factory Knoxville is backed by a lifetime warranty and tends to hold up for decades, which is also a detail buyers notice favorably during a home sale. What are the latest custom closet design trends? Closet Factory Knoxville's Alcoa design team has seen growing demand for glass-front display cabinetry, built-in closet lighting, and multi-purpose rooms that combine a closet or office with a fold-away Murphy bed for guest flexibility, alongside classic favorites like pull-out shoe racks and jewelry drawers. Can Closet Factory design closets for new construction homes? Yes. New construction throughout Knox, Blount, and Loudon counties typically comes with basic wire shelving as a builder default. Closet Factory Knoxville regularly works with new homeowners shortly after closing to design a custom system that makes full use of the closet space the builder provided.
